I would like to add storage for my riding mower and gardening tools, but I'm worried a shed will look unattractive in my yard. How can I meet my storage needs without compromising the beauty of my outdoor space?

That is a great question—and one we hear often! Many homeowners want the practical benefits of outdoor storage but are concerned about how a shed will impact the look and feel of their backyard. The good news is that you do not have to choose between function and beauty. You can have both.

Some ways to find the perfect balance would be to look for a storage shed manufacturer who offers a wide variety of shed styles. Designs ranging from classic garden cottages to modern designs are available to blend beautifully with your existing home and landscape. You can choose exterior siding and trim, as well as roof colors to match or complement your house, creating a seamless look which would add value to your property rather than taking away from it.

Consider a custom design such as additional windows for natural light as you work in your shed, or the addition of flower boxes for added visual appeal. Decorative doors are a nice touch as well, and can elevate the look of a shed and make it a true extension of your outdoor living space. Many customers are surprised by how attractive a well-designed shed can be!

Thoughtful placement is also key to the shed feeling naturally integrated into your yard. Consider where the shed will be placed to ensure it serves its purpose without dominating the view. Tucking it along the property line, integrating it into existing flower beds or nestled amongst trees, fences, or plantings, can help create an inviting appearance while solving your storage needs.

You can also consider a dual-purpose structure: Some shed designs are so appealing that they double as a focal point or gathering area in the yard. Whether it is a potting shed with a built-in sitting porch, or a pool house shed with a covered bar seating area, each can serve as a retreat that also holds your lawn equipment. We can help to create a solution for the homeowner that is both functional and visually inviting.

The bottom line is that a backyard shed doesn't have to be an eyesore. At Fox Country Sheds we take pride in building backyard
