treatments and bedding with a mix of complimentary fabrics and textures gives the room personality. The decorative rods and beautiful fabrics dress up the windows. Hunter Douglas blinds were used for privacy and for light and energy control. Mixing upholstered headboards with wood furniture adds character. No room is complete without the finishing touches of art-

After the builder and crews complete your new addition or renovation, the finishing touches of window treatments, furniture, and accessories need to be added to finish your "new" place. Just like a simple dress can look fabulous when you add the coordinating jewelry, shoes and purse, your house needs the finishing touches to make it a home.

The three bedrooms in the photos (starting on the opposite page and continuing on the following page spread) are from a local family's home who wanted their new guest rooms to be inviting to friends and family during their stay. Instead of using a neutral carpet, a black and taupe patterned carpet was selected to create flow for all three areas. Each room has its own personality but they coordinate with each other via the carpet color and pattern. Coordinating the window the windows, panels on decorative rods and flat Roman shades with ball fringe on the hem line enhance the beautiful windows of the Ware Mansion. The walls were dressed up with a vintage, crackle-designed wallpaper, combining a spa blue background with taupe and metallic-gold vanes. While everything is coordinated to the eye, there is a lot of mix and match of fabrics, accessories and furniture to give the room ample personality.

work, accessories, floral designs and lamps. When a room is completely decorated, it makes the room inviting to all who stay there.

The blue and green guestroom (first page), from the Ware Mansion in Oxford, PA, was displayed during the Designer Showhouse this past spring. The mix of light and dark colors gives this room a rich contrast without being too pale or too heavy. Crystal, glass and mirrors were used to reflect the beautiful outdoors into the room. Each piece of furniture in this room has a different finish—metal bed, painted dresser, mirrored table and a stained pedestal table which is also hand painted. Working with the natural daylight from
